

THE MANIFESTO OF GOOD

Among all aspirations that have inhabited the hearts of human beings throughout history, none is as universal as the desire to be happy.

For millennia generations have succeeded in the effort to obtain this reward by expending incalculable energy and resources on misconceived goals and useless conflicts – a consequence of the incomprehension of the simplest truth: all beings desire good.

Now is the time when we can overcome this mistake and entrain in an era of unprecedented happiness, prosperity, and harmony.

May the profound crises that threaten to collapse our existence propel us toward redemptive transformation.

Let us take on the responsibility of guiding change for good, being the masters of our own evolution.

Let us use the tremendous potential of our new and fantastic technologies to solve our vital problems and generate the common good not only for humans but for all beings on Earth.

Let us use the technology of artificial intelligence and automation to work to our advantage by providing the conditions necessary for an abundant life in every way.

Let us use the technology of meditation to connect to our inner self and our essence of peace, awakening the consciousness that guides the choices of good for us and for the world.

Let's use the heart technology to connect even more with each other. For it is enough to put ourselves in the other's place so that the understanding flourishes that all beings refuse suffering, all beings seek to be happy and, just as we wish them to do us good, all beings want it too.

We are all blessed with the ability to dream and with the fabulous power to create. This is our essence! Let's use it to promote our own evolution as a species and to shape this magnificent planet that is our source of life and our home in a beautiful place for all.

The future belongs to those who do good.
